

As an Indiana resident who is currently contentedly protected by the Indiana Telephone Privacy law, I am opposed to the idea of weakening said law as proposed in the CBA's petition of it. Before I had my name added to the state's "no-call list," my husband and I -- who both work from home -- received more than a dozen phone solicitations PER DAY. These calls began as early as 6 a.m. and went until as late as 10 p.m. It was very disruptive, to say the least. I truly enjoy the freedom from this harassment and am deeply opposed to the idea of weakening the barriers that are now in place. Thank you for your consideration.
